Looking at the News with Col. Hugh Clark

ONE of the complaints against Jews in Germany is that they penetrated into every line of business, but we doubt very much if they have gone into the manufacture of swastikas to sell to the Nazis.

Senator James Murdock has really no complaint against the executive of the Railway Trainmen which Canadian trainmen should worry about. He was the Canadian Vice-President of the International Union, a position he should have given up when he became a Senator. In his capacity as Spokesman for railwaymen he was bound to meet himself in his capacity as a Senator. He was also bound to meet his fellow Senators in the chamber or in committee and set them wondering as to whether he was speaking or acting in one capacity or the other. The executive meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, dismissed him, thus doing what he should have done voluntarily. They expected too much of him, no doubt believing that, being a Senator, he would have greater influence. They expected him to do or to prevent what neither he nor anyone else in the same position could do or prevent.

A British delegate told the British Commonwealth Conference that in the event of war between the United States and Japan, Canada could not avoid being involved.

We do not want to fight But by jingo if we do We'll just take up our weapons And lick the blooming two.

Near where we live and move and have our being a man recently shot and killed his wife, then shot and killed himself. That afternoon, Saturday the evening newspapers had a column and a half about it. On Monday the morning newspapers had a half-column about it. It was a local sensation for several days. Now the people are talking about other things—the dry weather, poor crops; fall fairs, the N.R.A., the next world series of ball games, and the prospects next winter of our local hockey team.

Twenty years ago—any time before the war—it would have created a tremendous sensation and would have been talked about for years in this community. Why the change? Did the war with its daily output of casualties blunt our sense of horror at the taking of human life? Has the fact that men were slain by the thousands in those four years diminished the value of human life in public estimation?

Seven Accidents During Week

Seven car accidents occurred within the Vulcan territory last week. Starting on Monday when the car owned by Pete Bowie crashed into the Simington store window, the week was an unfortunate one for car drivers. On Tuesday Mrs. Wallace of Lethbridge, overturned north of town. Little damage was done and the driver was unhurt. Wednesday a car and truck tangled on the north road to Mossleigh with considerable damage. On Thursday, C. B. Shimp and H. Gregg sustained severe injuries when the latter's car overturned in the ditch just out of town on the highway. A great deal of damage was done to the vehicle. On Friday Mrs. G. M. Whicher was painfully injured when the car in which she was driving ran into the ditch near the Wilderman school. She is at the present time a patient in the municipal hospital. Finishing the unlucky week was a double accident three miles east on the highway. The truck from the Harem farm ran into the ditch and while the Arney Motors wrecking car was pulling it up on the roadway, sideways to the right of way, Mr. Wegh with wife and children in their car crashed into the side of the Arney motor car. The passengers were badly shaken up and minor injuries resulted. The car was damaged, radiator, headlights and fenders being broken and bent.

Vulcan W.L. Entertain Visiting Institutes

Entertainment Provided by Local Women for Visitors; Over Ninety Present

The Vulcan W.L. entertained visiting institutes on Friday, October 6th at their regular monthly meeting held in the United Church auditorium. Over ninety ladies were present from local and neighboring institutes. Mrs. Wm. Peterson, president, opened the meeting and the singing of O Canada and the repeating of the creed were included in the opening exercises.

Business was first dealt with. It was decided by local members that poppies would again be sold by the order under auspices of the Canadian Legion. Mrs. Peterson was re-elected as representative of the W.L. in the Vulcan Relief Committee activities. The balance of the afternoon was then given over to the entertainment of the visitors.

Opening, the Vulcan members sang a selection of welcome, a very amusing and cleverly arranged song. Miss R. Hartwig accompanied by Miss B. Walker at the piano, sang, "When You Come Home Dear," and for encore, "The Old Refrain."

Mrs. Galbraith gave a very able answer to the question, "Why I belong to the W.L.," when called upon for a "stump" speech. Then followed selections by the Vulcan male quartette, Messrs. Ottewill, Conn, Harback and Smith, "God Bless the Prince of Wales," and "There's a Church in the Valley." All vocal selections were greatly applauded and appreciated.

Mrs. Hagerman, constituency convener, addressed the members on subjects interesting to the society. Other items of the entertainment included solo selections by Mr. Conn, "When the sands of the desert grow cold," and "Drink to me only with thine eyes," a stump speech by Mrs. R. Todd and a recitation by Miss Evelyn Peterson.

A novel contest was staged during the proceedings by Mrs. A. T. Martin, and great amusement was in evidence. Mrs. Hale and Mrs. Robson were the prize winners.

Community singing followed by luncheon concluded a very enjoyable afternoon. Mrs. Widney, constituency convener for Turner Valley-Okotoks was a visitor and expressed herself as being pleased with the occasion.

The members of the Vulcan W.L. wish to extend thanks to all who helped make the afternoon the success that it was.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Loxton and daughter accompanied by Miss N. Jackson were Thanksgiving holiday visitors at the home of Mrs. L. Jackson at Ensign.

CHARLES CLARK, Proprietor

WOULD REDUCE COSTS

When the perennial discussion on the over-governed condition of this country, came up recently, it was suggested that provincial representation could very well be reduced to the number of representatives in the Federal House. Seventeen electoral boundaries for Dominion representation are already set, so there need be no redistribution. There need be no duplication of voters' lists.

One provincial member could represent the Macleod constituency quite adequately. More power might be vested in municipal councils, and more authority.

It has been remarked more than once, that of all our governments, the municipal bodies appear to be the only ones actually able to reduce on taxation. One reason for this ability may be the fact that they are in close and constant touch with the people whom they represent. They realize conditions as they are, from intimate contact. They represent the people who have elected them in a very democratic way, and it is reasonable to believe that they could be entrusted with larger responsibilities than already lie with them in the matter of roads, hospitals, agriculture and so on.

With slightly increased responsibilities and more control of their revenue, existing municipal governments could function capably in meeting the modest needs of any community.

The provincial government consisting of seventeen members elected from the present federal ridings would be released from petty business which is, after all, purely municipal and could be concerned with larger provincial matters. There would necessarily be a Premier, an Attorney-General's department, a department for natural resources and public works, railroads, telephones, education, industry. But the machinery of administration could be greatly reduced, and the vicious circle of setting new taxes to create more revenue to pay servants to collect the taxes, would be eliminated.

The decentralization of power is growing in favor, because it more truly expresses democracy, and the will of the people. There has been a tendency in recent years for the major governments to assume more and more authority and revenue, stripping municipalities of many duties which they can quite as well carry on and piling up a tremendous overhead of expensive government. Cut down our provincial representation to seventeen members from our present federal ridings, return to the municipal governments some of their old independence and self-reliance, and thus take one real step toward a simplified government.

AUSTRALIA SEES WAY OUT

Australia's experiment in renouncing the gold standard some time ago, was watched with great interest by this country. Many of our citizens, dedicated to our own sound money policy, predicted Australia's ruin. Others, though in the minority, urged that Canada follow the example of the sister nation.

Apparently those who pressed for Canada's adoption of the same policy, were right, if one may judge from the reports on Australia's financial situation. It is announced that the government will not only balance its budget but will have a surplus of three million and that taxes will be reduced. The six state governments of Australia will have a total deficit of about 45 million. And it is further expected that the coming year will bring a larger surplus and further tax reductions.

From other sources it is learned that Australian agriculture is flourishing. Stock journals record a demand for purebred heavy horses that has practically exhausted the Scottish market. Australian buyers have been over in Scotland in numbers, and their search is for the best that can be bought. This is one direct confirmation of the general news that the Commonwealth has prospered since currency was depreciated. Evidence could be multiplied.

It is beyond question that the depreciated currency, maintained the buying power of the farmer, and gave him his chance to clear his accumulating stocks. Australia again, in contrast to Canada, has little wheat surplus, and can face the coming year with some assurance of sales.

Each country works out its own salvation or collapse according to the dominating belief of that country. But surely it must be generally conceded in Canada, that Australia's policy brought good results.

A HUMAN INSTITUTION

Writing of the convention of Weekly Press men in Vancouver recently the Vancouver Sun says:

"The weekly newspaper editor or publisher gets closer and deeper into the life of his public than almost any other branch of the journalistic profession.

"Beyond the small circle of his own intimate friends and that large group of acquaintances whom he learns to call by their first names, the big town editor never even approaches that close fellowship with his townsmen in whose every group he is a familiar associate and in whose every corner store he is welcome to loiter any Saturday night.

"The metropolitan editor can think and talk with his townsmen. The weekly editor can whistle with them.

"The latter may not have the quick alert news services of the former nor his rapid and well-trained interpretation of world events, but he grows to have in his mind a very complete and very sympathetic picture of human nature.

"The metropolitan newsman deals with the actions of men. The weekly editor deals with men. He is of the soil, and from his pen flows the fine earthy vigor of the soil.

"He is of that wholesomeness of mind and nature that impels him to consider the breaking of little Johnny Smith's leg to be of infinitely more news value in his community than the fact that Mr. Bennett might have been seen at Ascot in a grey top hat holding a cocktail with the Aga Khan."

WHEAT AGREEMENT

The result of the World Wheat Conference, has provided a temporary expedient in limiting production, and in the quotas allowed Canada has come off fairly well. But the Conference did not attack successfully the basic problem of consumption and production, although it is known that at present millions of people are in need of bread and cannot buy.

The New English Weekly, an old country publication, expresses a viewpoint which is frankly critical of the result of the Conference. It speaks mainly for importing countries.

"In the present agreement the problem presented to the world by the existence of plenty, side by side with scarcity, is solved by proposing to reduce plenty to the demands of scarcity, that is to say, by restricting world production, not to meet the needs of the world as consumer, but to the financial means of the world as victims of a private money monopoly.

"As a result of present settlement, it is inevitable that the inspection and control of wheat production will lead to an increasing degree of centralization of world power.

"Even if exporting countries were prepared to bargain amongst themselves, it might have been supposed that countries now unhappily dependent on them would at least reserve their right to feed themselves as far as they can, without consenting to restrictions. But since these importers have foregone even a future claim to economic independence, anything may happen now in respect of any commodity.

"Take the case of cotton. Japan is now able with the aid of English made machinery to compete with Manchester in Manchester. But the Japanese attack is, it is said, nothing compared with what is shortly coming from China, Egypt and Russia. It appears that the cotton textile demands of the world may shortly be supplied exclusively by Asiatic producers.

"But as in wheat, why not in cotton. International finance is so well organized that virtually all production anywhere in the world is in its hands. The U.S. Senate inquiries have shown the power of interlocking directorates, based on the same control of money, a relatively small group, operating through the World's Central Banks control to an increasing degree the real credit of the world. What is it to this group, whether Orient or Occident supplies cotton goods to the world, since they are the financial beneficiaries of both or either.

"Is it not a fact that today production is in excess, not of real demand, but of monetary demand. And before rationalizing production, would it not be well to consider consumption as the world's major problem. It is possible that production may have to be restricted one day, but present restriction is, we think, premature, is inspired by money power and is leading the world into a kind of World Fascism. In other words, the order of procedure for escape from the world's present dilemma is organization of consumption first, and planning for production only secondly and consequentially."

HAS SERVED US WELL

In view of the fact that Premier Brownlee has returned to Alberta to face a difficult and serious charge, a charge which, no matter what the outcome, will bring with it inexpressible humiliation, it is inevitable that the public will review the Premier's conduct in relation to public affairs. People who do not know him personally, will turn to what they do know of him in his service to the public.

They will recall that he assumed the Premiership when the new party which he represented, was untaught and inexperienced in administration. He held together that party, by nature individualistic and radical. He controlled the more ungovernable elements by his measured judgment, and strong personality. Irreparable harm might have been effected, if a less powerful influence had been at the head of government. He retained the confidence and esteem of the more well-informed and cautious elements of the party, upholding their hands as they upheld his.

He has checked much foolish legislation, and on the whole has given good legislation, which has been extremely difficult in the past few years. He has acted as mediator between conflicting forces, and has held the personal regard of all parties.

It is not too much to say that all citizens of Alberta have been proud to acknowledge him as the provincial representative in any larger conferences, where National or International leaders have met. They have depended on his dignity, wisdom and cool judgment, and though differing with him in viewpoint, they nevertheless felt that he was sincere in his devotion to the province and the people.

He has maintained the credit of the province, an extremely difficult accomplishment, when one considers that it is a province almost entirely agricultural and largely wheat growing.

The regard in which he has been held outside the province is obvious, when it is recalled that Ottawa has, on different occasions offered him most attractive posts. Aside from these, he has had many offers from private business, infinitely more attractive in remuneration and freedom from worry, than that of a Provincial Premiership. He has repeatedly refused to better himself materially, choosing instead to share the lot of the people of this province, and to serve to the best of his ability so long as his service is required.

It is well for the people of Alberta to recall these facts at the present time, and it would be well to refrain from joining the Whispering Chorus, which damns a man, before he has been able to utter a word on his own behalf.

TURNER VALLEY ROAD

(From High River Times)

At the time of writing, the Board of Trade meeting, to discuss the Turner Valley road has not been held, and what the outcome of that meeting will be is not known.

It has been argued that this district should refrain from asking the government at this time for any major expenditure which is not necessary.

In the opinion, not only of this district, but of fuel users as far as the border, this project of a Turner Valley-High River road is a necessity. The long procession of trucks going to the Valley from south and south-east is an unceasing stream of traffic. Each of those representing every point in Southern Alberta would be saved 60 miles of tedious travel by a direct all-weather road, a fact which in the aggregate mounts up tremendously in time and cost.

It is so far from being a local need that the interest of every town and district in the south is involved.

Again, it must not be overlooked that this district has been harder hit this year than at any time in its history. It has also been harder hit than almost any other part of the province. It will undoubtedly require some measures of relief, and relief in the form of roadwork would be more constructive than direct relief, especially in the face of the immediate need for the road. The town also will have a struggle to carry on without relinquishing the standards and services that it has built up. And a potential buying power, within such reasonable reach, would be an answer to the difficulties which undoubtedly confront the business life of the town.

It may be suggested not unreasonably, that this is one of the oldest and most stable of districts in the province. The people have contributed generously and steadfastly to the provincial exchequer over a long period of years. They have asked no great favors, and have demanded no unreasonable expenditures. This is a time when it is not out of place to remind the government of the substantial contributions made to provincial revenue, by this well-populated area.

The Australian conversion loan of 21 million pounds has been as big a success on the English market as the Canadian loan.

A REMINDER!

A few years ago thousands of Alberta Farmers petitioned and worked for the building of Alberta Pool Elevators. As a result the Pool system covers the Province in a close network.

The same reason which inspired grain growers to ask for the service and protection of this co-operative system of elevators suggest that patronage should continue to be extended to them on a generous scale.

SPOONER APPEAL WINS AT OTTAWA

The Supreme Court of Canada has given a decision upholding the appeal of Spooner Oils Ltd., and declaring the T.V. Conservation Act ultra vires, as affecting the Spooner Company.

The effect of the judgment is to assert that, since the Spooner Oils Company held their lease from the Dominion government—granted at a date prior to the transfer of the natural resources—the conservation act is invalid so far as this company's property is concerned.

Whether this means, however, that every act of the Turner Valley Gas Conservation Board since its inception has been illegal and the provincial government can no longer impose restrictions upon the output of gas in Turner Valley, is a question upon which no one is prepared to comment as yet.

Under the Conservation Act, gas production was reduced, and three of the Spooner oil wells were reduced in earning capacity from $277.20 daily maximum to $14.60, which made the Company's leases of little or no value.

The action was originally tried by Mr. Justice Ewing in Calgary, who gave judgment in favor of the Conservation Board. The Supreme Court of Alberta also upheld this decision.

WEDDING BELLSANDERSON—HUTTS

A quiet wedding was solemnized in Lethbridge on Saturday, September 30, when Vesta Odessa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Hutts of Nobleford became the bride of Wayne Anderson, son of Mrs. Bertha Anderson of Champion. Rev. Pritchard of Lethbridge officiated at the ceremony.

The bride has been a most popular and charming young resident of Nobleford for some years and in 1931 entered the Galt Hospital in Lethbridge as a nurse-in-training. However, due to illness she was forced to abandon her profession. The past six months have been spent in the Champion district where she made many friends. Mr. Anderson is a popular member of the younger set.

The best wishes are extended to the young people for many years of happiness.

Wedding Dance

A wedding dance was held in the Champion Community hall on Wednesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Anderson. Gifts were presented to the bride and groom during the evening, Mr. G. M. Campbell making the presentations. The bride and groom responded very graciously, thanking their many friends for their kindness.

A large crowd attended the dance and all joined in wishing the happy couple a most prosperous future. —Champion Chronicle.

IS PEST ATTACKING BINNED GRAIN

The Lethbridge Herald makes note of a new menace that is attacking stored grain in bins. It is a tiny organism, and reports of outbreak have come from Claresholm.

One of the Claresholm elevators is running twenty-five thousand bushels of affected grain through the cleaner in an effort to eradicate the pest. The only grain affected is that in storage from previous years.

The Dominion Entomological branch informed the Herald Monday that they had been warned last spring to be on the alert for a mite that attacks threshed grain, but no occurrences had been reported. The Ellison Milling and Elevator Company stated that there had been no evidence of the plague at their elevators, but officials admitted they had heard of it in sections of the north.

Looking at the News

A clergyman deploras that we have not now the spirit of the martyrs. It is all right to have that spirit but no one wants martyrs or martyrdom. Several hundred years ago there were many martyrs in England and Scotland but that was because there was then another spirit as well—that of inquisition and persecution. It required the spirit of the martyrs to kill the spirit of the persecutors. Both were equally sincere and strong-headed. Each was dead sure he was right. It took a long time for men to discover, as Laurier once put it, that even bad men have rights that good men should respect, and one of these is the right to hold erroneous opinions.

†—†—†

It is a curious thing that there has always been more intolerance about religious beliefs than about anything else. The list of martyrs would be small indeed were it not for the ferocity with which people contended for their own particular ideas of religion. It was not enough to deplore inorthodoxy in others. They had to be made to recant under torture or die at the stake. With the experience of the ages to guide them, men have ceased to be so cocksure of their opinions that they are willing to die for them or kill those who disagree.

TAKE HEED FROM THIS AWFUL FATEDo Not Borrow Your Weekly Paper
Least Worse Things Befal—Get One of Your Own

A man who would not take his home paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a hive of bees, and in ten minutes he looked like a warty squash. His cries reached his father who ran to his assistance, and failing to note a barbed wire fence ran into that, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $5 pair of pants. The cow took advantage of the gap in the fence, and got into the corn. Hearing the racket, his wife ran, upset a four-gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens and drowned them. In her hurry she lost a $47 set of teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the cream, and into the parlor, ruining a brand new $80 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, and the dog broke up eleven setting hens and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four night shirts. The man could have got a paper of his own at $2.00 a year, and saved all the trouble and expense.—Pincher Creek Echo.

HOADLEY URGES TURNING TO STOCK

One of the most pernicious things in western agriculture has been the ease in which wealth had been obtained from wheat production, Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture and acting premier, said in an address in Calgary this week. Mr. Hoadley recommended a turning away from straight wheat production to livestock production.

"Wheat production pre-supposes five or six months of holidays," he said. "However, you see the real farm home on the land of the man who grows stock. It is different from the place to which a man returns from California to plant his wheat."

Finest Stock

Dealing with marketing opportunities and problems, Mr. Hoadley declared that the finest stock which Canada grew was exhibited at the Royal show at Toronto, and that if all of Canada's stock were of the same high quality as shown there "we could take full advantage offered through the economic agreements."

"To much second-class, and below that, stock is a drug on the livestock market," he continued. "It is not desirable that we produce more of a poor quality, but more of a high class quality."

He said that a recent wheat agreement provided that Canada cut down its wheat production by 15 per cent. next year.

"Turn to livestock," he advised. "That is the way to do it."

The following story has been in the Financial Post, Lethbridge Herald and here and there.

Around Toronto every one is chuckling over the classic story told by Raymond Moley at the Liberal Summer Conference at Port Hope. Perhaps there are people elsewhere who have not yet heard the yarn, and so we reprint it here in Prof. Moley's own words:

"Now I come to the policies we are following in Washington. These policies have been undertaken because we have felt that quick and deliberate and positive action was absolutely necessary."

"We claim no perfection. I am reminded of a story of my good friend, Al Smith. He was in a small town in the Northern part of New York state, during his campaign for the governor ship, on a cold Sunday morning. There was a strong wind blowing. Half of the Smith party were members of a church that is rigorous in its demands in regard to attendance at Sunday morning mass. Al was one of them. The other half of the party were of various and sundry religious beliefs. They were lying securely and warmly in their beds. Al got up, dressed in the cold and made ready to go to church. As he reached the front door, he turned around and contemplated the people resting in comfort for a moment and said, 'Wouldn't it be hell if they were right and we were wrong?'"

"All I can say about our program is this. We are up and dressed."

A Liberal organization for the Nanton-Claresholm constituency was formed at Stavelly. Alex. Allan, Stavelly, chairman, G. W. Ringrose, Claresholm, secretary; J. Glendenning, Nanton, executive.
